

furniture

Hivemindesign

This fresh-faced firm has devised Magnus, a shelving system with magnetic appeal. The unit eschews hardware in favor of a more magical solution: Powerful magnets hold together the piece's pine planks and steel plates. 27 Montrose Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11206; 718-782-3539; hivemindesign.com. circle 307

Nollette Studio

Thick planks of solid walnut and clean stainless-steel legs define the Tea table. The off-center shallow bowl is hand carved. 64 Union Street, 2nd Floor, Brooklyn, NY 11231; 718-596-0966; nollettestudio.com. circle 308

Halcon

Built around a flexible steel structure, the Abacus system offers highly adaptable workstations that come together (and apart) without the help of facilities staff. Users can rearrange components with ease: Wall-hung units are positionable at any height, and work surfaces connect at any point. 1811 Second Avenue NW, Stewartville, MN 55976; 507-533-4235; halconcorp.com. circle 309

NettoCollection

Appoint the nursery in minimalist style. David Netto's unmistakably fashionable Loft collection includes a crib, dresser, and changing table in white lacquer and ash veneer. 270 Lafayette Street, 806, New York, NY 10012; 212-343-1545; nettocollection.com. circle 311

KI

The aptly named Hurry Up! table accommodates those spur-of-the-moment location changes for meetings. Designed by Giancarlo Piretti, the piece is easily set up, moved, and nested in training, teaming, multipurpose, and conference areas. 1330 Bellevue Street, P.O. Box 8100, Green Bay, WI 54308; 800-424-2432; ki.com. circle 310

